How to Use This Literature Guide

Today's standards demand rigor and relevance in the reading of complex texts. The units in this series guide teachers in a rich and deep exploration of worthwhile works of literature for classroom study. The most rigorous instruction can also be interesting and engaging!

Many current strategies for effective literacy instruction have been incorporated into these instructional guides for literature. Throughout the units, text-dependent questions are used to determine comprehension of the book as well as student interpretation of the vocabulary words. The books chosen for the series are complex exemplars of carefully crafted works of literature. Close reading is used throughout the units to guide students toward revisiting the text and using textual evidence to respond to prompts orally and in writing. Students must analyze the story elements in multiple assignments for each section of the book. All of these strategies work together to rigorously guide students through their study of literature.

The next few pages will make clear how to use this guide for a purposeful and meaningful literature study. Each section of this guide is set up in the same way to make it easier for you to implement the instruction in your classroom.

Theme Thoughts

The great works of literature used throughout this series have important themes that have been relevant to people for many years. Many of the themes will be discussed during the various sections of this instructional guide. However, it would also benefit students to have independent time to think about the key themes of the novel.

Before students begin reading, have them complete Pre-Reading Theme Thoughts (page 13). This graphic organizer will allow students to think about the themes outside the context of the story. They'll have the opportunity to evaluate statements based on important themes and defend their opinions. Be sure to have students keep their papers for comparison to the Post-Reading Theme Thoughts (page 64). This graphic organizer is similar to the pre-reading activity. However, this time, students will be answering the questions from the point of view of one of the characters in the novel. They have to think about how the character would feel about each statement and defend their thoughts. To conclude the activity, have students compare what they thought about the themes before they read the novel to what the characters discovered during the story.

Vocabulary

Each teacher overview page has definitions and sentences about how key vocabulary words are used in the section. These words should be introduced and discussed with students. There are two student vocabulary activity pages in each section. On the first page, students are asked to define the ten words chosen by the author of this unit. On the second page in most sections, each student will select at least eight words that he or she finds interesting or difficult. For each section, choose one of these pages for your students to complete. With either assignment, you may want to have students get into pairs to discuss the meanings of the words. Allow students to use reference guides to define the words. Monitor students to make sure the definitions they have found are accurate and relate to how the words are used in the text.

On some of the vocabulary student pages, students are asked to answer text-related questions about the vocabulary words. The following question stems will help you create your own vocabulary questions if you'd like to extend the discussion.

- How does this word describe _____'s character?
- In what ways does this word relate to the problem in this story?
- How does this word help you understand the setting?
- In what ways is this word related to the story's solution?
- Describe how this word supports the novel's theme of
- What visual images does this word bring to your mind?
- For what reasons might the author have chosen to use this particular word?

At times, more work with the words will help students understand their meanings. The following quick vocabulary activities are a good way to further study the words.

- Have students practice their vocabulary and writing skills by creating sentences and/or paragraphs in which multiple vocabulary words are used correctly and with evidence of understanding.
- Students can play vocabulary concentration. Students make a set of cards with the words and a separate set of cards with the definitions. Then, students lay the cards out on the table and play concentration. The goal of the game is to match vocabulary words with their definitions.
- Students can create word journal entries about the words. Students choose words they think are important and then describe why they think each word is important within the novel.

Analyzing the Literature

After students have read each section, hold small-group or whole-class discussions. Questions are written at two levels of complexity to allow you to decide which questions best meet the needs of your students. The Level 1 questions are typically less abstract than the Level 2 questions. Level 1 is indicated by a square, while Level 2 is indicated by a triangle. These questions focus on the various story elements, such as character, setting, and plot. Student pages are provided if you want to assign these questions for individual student work before your group discussion. Be sure to add further questions as your students discuss what they've read. For each question, a few key points are provided for your reference as you discuss the novel with students.

Reader Response

In today's classrooms, there are often great readers who are below-average writers. So much time and energy is spent in classrooms getting students to read on grade level that little time is left to focus on writing skills. To help teachers include more writing in their daily literacy instruction, each section of this guide has a literature-based reader response prompt. Each of the three genres of writing is used in the reader responses within this guide: narrative, informative/explanatory, and opinion/argument. Students have a choice between two prompts for each reader response. One response requires students to make connections between the reading and their own lives. The other prompt requires students to determine text-to-text connections or connections within the text.

Close Reading the Literature

Within each section, students are asked to closely reread a short section of text. Since some versions of the novels have different page numbers, the selections are described by chapter and location, along with quotations to guide the readers. After each close reading, there are text-dependent questions to be answered by students.

Encourage students to read each question one at a time and then go back to the text and discover the answer. Work with students to ensure that they use the text to determine their answers rather than making unsupported inferences. Once students have answered the questions, discuss what they discovered. Suggested answers are provided in the answer key.

The generic, open-ended stems below can be used to write your own text-dependent questions if you would like to give students more practice.

- Give evidence from the text to support
- Justify your thinking using text evidence about
- Find evidence to support your conclusions about
- What text evidence helps the reader understand . . . ?
- Use the book to tell why _____ happens.
- Based on events in the story,
- Use text evidence to describe why

Making Connections

The activities in this section help students make cross-curricular connections to writing, mathematics, science, social studies, or the fine arts. Each of these types of activities requires higher-order thinking skills from students.

Creating with the Story Elements

It is important to spend time discussing the common story elements in literature. Understanding the characters, setting, and plot can increase students' comprehension and appreciation of the story. If teachers discuss these elements daily, students will more likely internalize the concepts and look for the elements in their independent reading. Another important reason for focusing on the story elements is that students will be better writers if they think about how the stories they read are constructed.

Students are given three options for working with the story elements. They are asked to create something related to the characters, setting, or plot of the novel. Students are given a choice in this activity so that they can decide to complete the activity that most appeals to them. Different multiple intelligences are used so that the activities are diverse and interesting to all students.

Analyzing the Literature

Provided below are discussion questions you can use in small groups, with the whole class, or for written assignments. Each question is given at two levels so you can choose the right question for each group of students. Activity sheets with these questions are provided (pages 18–19) if you want students to write their responses. For each question, a few key discussion points are provided for your reference.

| Story Element | ■ Level 1 | ▲ Level 2 | Key Discussion Points |
|---------------|--|---|--|
| Character | What do you learn about the narrator of the story in chapter 1? | What important things do you learn about Melody's character in chapter 1? | The narrator, Melody, loves words. She has a good memory and has parents who talk and sing to her. Discuss how the author builds this information and then ends the chapter with the startling information that Melody has never spoken. |
| Plot | What decision does Melody's mom make after their visit to Dr. Hugely? | Would Melody be better off in a special facility than a public school? Why or why not? | Melody's parents send her to a public school. There are advantages and disadvantages to the school. The teachers aren't always the best. But Melody does learn from one teacher. She also gets to observe kids—but does not get to fully participate. |
| Character | What role does Mrs. V play in Melody's life? How does she push her? | In chapter 6, do you think Mrs. V did the right thing by making Melody roll over? Why or why not? | Mrs. V makes Melody do things. She suspects that Melody is smart and confirms that. She also gives her treats that her parents won't give her, such as soda. It may have been hopeless to make her roll over, but Melody has an important victory and shows determination. |
| Setting | In chapter 6, how does Melody's dad change their home to adjust it for Melody? | How does having a person in a wheelchair affect a family and its home? | Melody's dad adds a ramp to the house. The doorways must be wide enough for a wheelchair, and ramps may be needed for stairs. The family has to work together to help Melody. Melody has to be lifted in and out of bed, onto the toilet, etc. |

Analyzing the Literature

Directions: Think about the section you just read. Read each question, and state your response with textual evidence.

1. What do you learn about the narrator of the story in chapter 1?

2. What decision does Melody’s mom make after their visit to Dr. Hugely?

3. What role does Mrs. V play in Melody’s life? How does she push her?

4. In chapter 6, how does Melody’s dad change their home to adjust it for Melody?

Close Reading the Literature

Directions: Closely reread the first seven paragraphs of chapter 7. Begin with, “When I sleep, I dream.” Stop with, “It was awesome.” Read each question, and then revisit the text to find evidence that supports your answer.

1. Use examples from the text that describe Melody’s behavior in dreams. Contrast those acts with her feeling upon waking up.

2. What does Melody think about the classroom aides? Describe specific things the aides do.

3. Using examples from the story, explain why Mrs. Tracy’s teaching is a turning point for Melody.

4. Use the text to summarize why the year with Mrs. Tracy is “awesome” for Melody.

Creating with the Story Elements

Directions: Thinking about the story elements of character, setting, and plot in a novel is very important to understanding what is happening and why. Complete one of the following activities based on what you've read so far. Be creative, and have fun!

Characters

Create a wanted poster for Mrs. Billups. Include her characteristics, her misdeeds, and a drawing of how you think she looks.

Setting

Create a model of the classroom snowman described in chapter 5. Use any medium you'd like, and include details of how it's dressed, its appearance, and so on.

Plot

Melody is really excited when she finally gets her talking board and spends hours learning how to customize it to her wants and needs. Create a mock talking board that includes the words you would want if you couldn't speak.
